COVID19: Plunder and Population Reduction

Structural Violence in 2020

What is the main difference between a virus and a trojan?

Trojans are also known to create a backdoor on your computer that gives malicious users access to your system, possibly allowing confidential or personal information to be compromised. Unlike viruses and worms, Trojans do not reproduce by infecting other files nor do they self-replicate. 14 Dec 2015

Abstract

An exploration into the structural causes of COVID-19, its nature and its timing, in the context of plunder and structural violence incentivised by the current political economy. Inequality, and all that flows from it, is a product of structure - institutional hierarchy and the consequent centralisation of wealth and power. The structure is changing with the advent of decentralised digital money (tokenisation) and the internet's network effect that provides the stimulus and means to co-create inclusive modes of economic, political and social activity. Exchange value, exploited to maximise profits and centralise power, is giving way to use value as the criterion for success. Carried to its logical conclusion, this structural shift to an environment of distributed, self-organising networks will incentivise mutual support and co-creative development that will benefit everyone.

1 Why Now?

1.1 COVID-19 – a Trojan, Not a Virus

Despite the medical nomenclature, COVID-19 looks far less like a virus and more like a strategically planned trojan horse, designed to infiltrate and colonise everything and everybody on the planet:

In computing, a Trojan horse, or trojan, is any malware which misleads users of its true intent. The term is derived from the Ancient Greek story of the deceptive Trojan Horse that led to the fall of the city of Troy.

*Trojans are generally spread by some form of social engineering...*¹

1.2 Time Up for the Current Money Cycle

We've been on the trajectory towards economic and financial collapse since the 2008 subprime mortgage crisis. If market forces been left to their own devices, banks and many other miscreant organisations that contributed to the crisis would have gone bankrupt. Bondholders would have lost a lot of money and the system would have undergone a "reset", akin to what used to happen by Jubilee when all debts were forgiven.

If sound economic and financial foundations were to be re-established, bank failures and investor losses would have been essential to clean out the Augean Stables² of accumulated debt arising from duplicitous financial engineering,. However, that's not what happened.

Led by Hank Paulson, head of the US Federal Reserve Board (Fed), bankers³ frightened politicians into signing off on the bailout of banks and bondholders. They claimed that failure of major banks would jeopardise the global economy.

The Fed, Bank of England, ECB and the Bank of Japan embarked on a programme of money issuance starting with the initial bailouts (TARP, AIG, etc.). This was followed by subsequent quantitative easing (QE) which has been the central bankers' response to any signs of weakness in financial markets ever since. In short, money printing has continued to enrich the rich while obscuring the economic reality that most people are getting poorer and poorer.

Eventually, confidence in over-issued fiat money evaporates (examples from history: John Law and the Duke of Orleans in France⁴ and the Weimar Republic in Germany following WW1⁵). The warning signs had been evident for some years but, by the summer of 2019⁶, it was clear that collapse was imminent; increasing financial instability meant central banks had every incentive to "trigger" a reset of the global financial system on their terms.

If the Fed, or any other major central bank, were to over-issue their currency in isolation, that currency would collapse relative to other major currencies. Major currencies are being over-issued in concert and, consequently, they appear to be stable because people are used to looking at currencies as a measure of national competitiveness, i.e. relative to each other. However, they are devaluing relative to other measures. Hitherto, the manipulation of gold, silver and crypto-currency alternatives to fiat money, ensures that these are yet to reflect reality in dollar, sterling, euro or yen terms. Nevertheless, pressure is building and when confidence in fiat money evaporates, the price of gold and other alternative stores of value will take-off.

To forestall this, what appears to be planned is a global, central bank issued digital currency, probably referenced to essential resources, primarily energy, hence the demonisation of CO2⁷. This global digital currency will replace current national and regional currencies. Moving to centralised, digital currency will provide the enforcement infrastructure to enable tracking, tagging and mandatory vaccination for everyone on the planet; one currency to rule them all. Those who don't comply will have no access to the global medium of exchange and, consequently, the means to life.

We're no longer talking about a "nation's" money but a world currency.

"Let me issue and control a nation's money and I care not who writes the laws."

Meyer Amschel Rothschild – 1790

However, as we argue in *The End of the Age of Plunder*⁸, decentralising forces are gathering momentum and distributed tokenisation may well negate these plans; hence the urgency to manufacture the "coronavirus" pandemic to induce financial and economic collapse. If central banks don't execute their plan now, decentralising forces may gain sufficient momentum to render it impossible in future.

1.3 Plunder Exploit

Cycles of boom and bust are exploited to hoover up real wealth and assets in the carnage that results from economic and financial collapse. The beneficiaries of this system have accrued fabulous wealth and global power from previous cycles, particularly the 2008 crisis but now we're in the end game. This is the final act of plunder to gain total control of all land and all resources. We humans are the most valuable resource and COVID-19 is the invisible weapon of choice to ensure our subservience. Section 2 describes examples that illustrate accelerating plunder and the structural violence which accompanies it.

1.4 A Hard but Great Awakening

Potent methods are available to those involved in organising the COVID-19 trojan, for example:

- mass manipulation and psychological torture techniques, described in Section 3, such as the Alice in Wonderland technique adopted by the CIA in the 1960s;
- various means to attack our immune systems, thereby reducing our resistance to disease, as explained Section 3;
- and the deliberate degradation of our economic environment on which we rely to access the essential means to life, i.e. plunder, as described in Section 2.

However, a growing number of people are overcoming their resistance to explore "conspiracy theories". They are discovering that "authority", rather than looking after our best interests and our future, is actively working to prejudice both.

As a result, inconsistencies and contradictions in official narratives relating to many issues and events are coming under closer scrutiny. A growing number of intelligent, questioning people are awakening to a reality that bears little relationship to the 'official' narrative. More people are becoming disillusioned with "authority", media and academia⁹. When we look below the surface, what we find is that the "experts" whose opinions are used justify the "war on terror", the responses to "climate change" and now "coronavirus", are in fact direct beneficiaries in terms of funding, status and "celebrity" lifestyles and in reality are "owned" by those who create and control money (money power)¹⁰.

Through its funding of academic and research institutions, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation has invested $billions to promote mandatory vaccination across the world. By his own admission, Bill Gates has made vast sums from these "investments".

Some critics of Microsoft's operating system see parallels between COVID-19 and the vulnerabilities of the Windows operating system, the source of Bill Gates' wealth and power. In computing, trojans are inserted into systems not to cause damage directly but to provide a "backdoor" into systems which can be exploited for other purposes, for example, to steal information or plant disinformation. COVID-19 is not the danger in itself but it is a "backdoor" into our systems (our psyches and institutions) to be exploited for other purposes. This is why we refer to COVID-19 as a trojan.

There is a growing realisation that Bill Gates is not working in isolation and that he should be viewed as a cog in an over-arching machine Nevertheless, those driving this agenda may have overreached themselves and it may yet be their undoing. More and more people are learning about the danger of vaccines, the manipulation and ownership of viruses and the industrialisation of disease. A study of available data clearly indicates that vaccinations, rather than curing lethal diseases, are causing them¹¹.

In Section 4 of *The End of the Age of Plunder*¹², we described the gathering momentum of powerful, self-interested forces driving the decentralisation of money.

In *Structures and Money in Transition*¹³, we describe how the strategy for a one world government has unfolded. This and prior analysis¹⁴ is resonating with a growing number of people.

In short, the "authorised" narratives were already beginning to falter pre-COVID-19 and were in danger of collapse before plans for the final plunder and control of population could be executed.

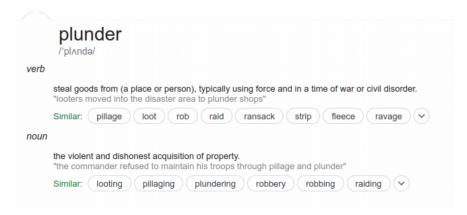

To reiterate, inconsistencies and contradictions in official narratives were becoming more obvious. Therefore, drastic action was needed in order to divert attention from the real cause, the flawed and dysfunctional political economy for which an "adjustment" was long overdue.

In retrospect, COVID-19 had been in "gestation" for at least a century. Our calculated misunderstanding of viruses and vaccines has been ingrained in our collective awareness ever since Louis Pasteur promoted germ theory in the 19th century¹⁵.

People are awakening to the agenda and the plunder that is now out in the open.

2 Structural Methods to Plunder the Economy

2.1 Plunder

There is carnage on the high street. Retailers are going broke and while the alleged pandemic is cited as the culprit, many were set up to fail long before the advent of this manufactured crisis. Leveraged buyouts load targeted companies with debt. This ensures that they cannot compete with monopolies like Amazon because their debt servicing costs are such, they cannot invest in any future development.

Here's how private equity is gutting retail¹⁶ - In the bankruptcies of J. Crew, Neiman Marcus, and many others -- it wasn't just bad business practices and the rise of e-commerce that did them in. CNN Business' Jon Sarlin explains the perils of leveraged buyouts.

Big chains filed for bankruptcy every week in May. Here are 6 of them¹⁷ - Temporary store closures. Near-zero travel demand. People shopping online even more as they're stuck home. It was the perfect storm for bankruptcy for some of the country's most recognizable consumer brands -- and several have filed recently.

The carnage from the coordinated response to the alleged coronavirus pandemic isn't limited to retailers.

Boeing job cuts start to hit nearly 13,000 workers¹⁸ - More layoffs are expected, some of which may affect the UK.

More plunder amid the carnage:

Buyout giant hoping to profit off Cirque du Soleil bankruptcy¹⁹ - The private equity giant that rode Cirque du Soleil to the brink of bankruptcy now wants to share in the spoils...

"Canadian entertainment firm Cirque du Soleil is to cut 3,500 jobs after striking a deal to avoid bankruptcy. ...The company will now try to restructure while shedding about 95% of its staff."

We will never hear of most of the casualties arising from the enforced shutdown of large swathes of the global economy. Nevertheless, in developed economies such as the UK, these include many small to medium sized businesses (SMEs) which, at the beginning of 2019, were responsible for a substantial proportion of economic activity and employment in the UK²⁰.

UK SMEs and the Economy:

- At the start of 2019 there were 5.82 million small businesses (with 0 to 49 employees), 99.3% of the total business. SMEs account for 99.9% of the business population (5.9 million businesses).
- SMEs account for three fifths of the employment and around half of turnover in the UK private sector.
- Total employment in SMEs was 16.6 million (60% of the total), whilst turnover was estimated at £2.2 trillion (52%).

Thus far, it is unknown how many of these SMEs will survive. Many have seen their customer base evaporate in the "lockdown" of the UK economy, while mega-monopolies such as Amazon have extended their market share and seen their market capitalisation soar accordingly.²¹

While the effects of the restriction on trade have yet to be quantified, the indications are not good. 9.3 million UK employees from 1.1 million businesses are "furloughed" as of now. What will happen to those employees when support from the government furlough scheme is withdrawn? Who knows? Meanwhile, payrolls are down, many are under-employed and job vacancies at a record low. Latest estimates suggest that due to the crisis, GDP has already dropped by 25%.

This sabotage of the UK, and other economies, is plunder in action because not only is trade "stolen" by the likes of Amazon but the burgeoning government costs of "mitigating" the full effects of the lockdown regulations and those to implement them, will be paid by the usual victims, the population.

Accelerating unemployment caused by the orchestrated response to COVID-19, together with the substitution of humans with AI and robots, is increasing pressure for an alternative means to support the victims of unemployment and underemployment. Taken at face value, the proposed introduction of universal basic income, which has gained support within "activist" and oppositional politics, seems to be a logical response to a situation where paid employment is no longer sufficient to provide the means to life. However, like all potentially good ideas, basic income has been colonised by the system and, in conjunction with a centralised currency, will likely be used to coerce people to accept mandatory vaccinations and to ensure compliance with any conditions that are imposed, irrespective of their merit.

2.2. Structural Fraud

In recent months, authorities have begun to focus on criminal activity related to COVID-19 and the measures to "contain" it, identifying scams relating to the provision of PPE (personal protection equipment) and fraudulent claims for government financial support to mitigate the effects of the "lockdown". A recent webinar is illustrative of the focus:

The ninth episode on "Tracking Digital Financial Crimes and Fraud" will explore how fraudsters are leveraging increased fear and uncertainty during the COVID-19 pandemic to steal money. Scammers have been known to lure customers from trusted e-commerce sites offering products that claim to prevent COVID-19 onto unrelated and unregulated messaging sites to accept payment in cryptocurrencies for products that do not actually exist. The session will provide an insight on tools that can be used for tracking digital financial crimes fraud.²²

Meanwhile, the fraud and criminality at the heart of banking and today's money system is ignored, even when major banks commit indictable crimes. Invariably, an "agreed settlement" is paid to ensure the full extent of their criminality is never revealed.²³

2.3 The Method - Structural Violence

Structural violence is a term commonly ascribed to Johan Galtung, which he introduced in the article "Violence, Peace, and Peace Research" (1969). It refers to a form of violence wherein some social structure or social institution may harm people by preventing them from meeting their basic needs.²⁴

Structural violence is a product of structure rather than acts of violence that can be attributed to individuals, groups or organisations in isolation.

When mass lay-offs from large companies hit the headlines, one can easily imagine the grave consequences for every individual, their families and communities. However, these headlines don't begin to convey the scale of growing unemployment and the number of people who are becoming underemployed. This is an example of the structural violence within economies – unemployment kills²⁵.

Official statistics are often misleading, particularly when it comes to unemployment which is invariably under-recorded because many employment "casualties" aren't classified as unemployed. In the US, official figures put the pre-COVID unemployment figure at 3.6% whereas estimates of real unemployment suggest 6.9%, nearly double. *The US Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis forecasts that unemployment could rise to 30% during the pandemic.*²⁶ To put this into context, US unemployment reached 25% during the Great Depression of the 1930s.

We have yet to see the full effect of the "lockdown" measures in the UK, which were imposed four days after 19th March 2020²⁷ when the government, under advice from panels of experts, downgraded COVID-19's classification as a high consequence infectious disease (HCID). What is certain, there will be no reversion of the economy or of people's behaviour to the pre-COVID-19 position.

The lockdown measures themselves are structurally violent because they too are forms of torture (See Section 3.6). The term "lockdown" comes from the collective punishment regime applied in penal systems, i.e. prison. Self-isolation and social-distancing are forms of torture because humans are social creatures who thrive on physical and emotional contact – these measures deprive us of these vital stimuli to our immune systems and are a contributing factor to soaring mortality in those countries which adopted strict lockdown measures²⁸.

"Authority" may not, as yet, be beating down doors in the middle of the night to cart people off to be tortured and killed. Nevertheless, the psychological torture arising from fear of both the elusive virus²⁹ and an uncertain future, causes alarmingly real physical and mental debilitation, which is affecting every susceptible individual. (See Section 3).

As a result of such COVID-19 induced debilitation, people are far more susceptible to plunder and are more likely to take on imprudent loan commitments. Under stress, people make poor financial decisions that may ultimately result in losing their homes, their families and more.

The individual symptoms of structural violence are incalculable but suffice to say every "order" or demand for compliance to "authority" on a bogus pretext, is an act of violence. Violence is also incited by encouraging those who live in fear of the "coronavirus" to inform on or attack those whom they regard as "breaking the rules" while "putting others' lives in jeopardy". Little do they know that they put all our lives in jeopardy through their compliance.

The Stasi web of informers in former East Germany enabled a few to control millions and sadly, people don't seem to recognise the similarities those methods have with contact tracing and other forms of "citizen engagement". Some of us who lived through the Cold War recognise the many parallels with the former Soviet Union and are both appalled and astonished at the majority's lack of imagination/understanding.

3 Structural Violence and Population Control – Vaccination, Masks, Social Distancing and Isolation

3.1 Global Impacts

The COVID-19 global action plan is a blueprint for one world government and is integrated with the planned reset of the global economy³⁰ (referred to in Section 1.2) and the United Nations' (UN) Agenda 2030.

The effects of this global action plan ripple out far and wide. For example, the sudden cessation of economic activity in the developed world, is having lethal effect on an estimated 1 billion dependants in the developing world who rely on remittances from their working relatives.

Remittances shelter a large number of poor and vulnerable households, underpinning the survival strategies of over 1 billion people. In 2019, an estimated 200 million people in the global migrant workforce sent home US$715 billion (£571 billion). Of this, it's estimated US$551 billion supported up to 800 million households living in low- and middle-income³¹

Migrant remittances provide an economic lifeline to poor households in many countries; a reduction in remittance flows could increase poverty and reduce households' access to much-needed health services. The crisis could exacerbate xenophobic, discriminatory treatment of migrants, which calls for greater vigilance against such practices. This Brief is largely focused on international migrants, but governments should not ignore the plight of internal migrants. The magnitude of internal migration is about two - and - a - half times that of international migration. Lockdowns, loss of employment, and social distancing prompted a chaotic and painful process of mass return for internal migrants in India and many countries in Latin America.³²

Everyone participating in, and benefitting from, the global supply chain of food, consumables, capital goods and resources is affected. This supply chain will not revert to its previous state, prejudicing the prospects for all of us.

3.2 Targeted "lockdown"

Against the background of the alleged national "relaxation" of lockdown measures, self-isolation and social-distancing in the UK, structural violence is now being directed at regional communities.

Leicester forced into local lockdown to combat surge in Covid-19 cases³³ - New measures affect schools and non-essential retail shops as the rest of England embraces new freedoms from Saturday (30th June 2020)

Leaving aside the widespread misattribution of COVID-19 (not a high consequence infectious disease³⁴) as a cause of death, even official data from the UK's Office of National Statistics (ONS) fail to reveal the alleged "spike" in coronavirus deaths cited to justify the Leicester "lockdown".

The "testing" for COVID-19 is notoriously unreliable³⁵, giving rise to a sizeable proportion of both false positive and false negative results. Furthermore, as "coronavirus" is present in those suffering from a common cold, many can test positive without any symptoms. Therefore there are no grounds on which to lockdown Leicester nor anywhere else³⁶.

All the indications are that the Leicester "lockdown" is a pre-planned political stratagem designed to "test" resistance to the imposition of the "new normal". If this targeted lockdown is broadly accepted, the Leicester template will be applied to many more regions as a permanent measure or until the imposition of a mandatory vaccination programme, which appears to be a primary objective in the fabrication of this bogus pandemic³⁷.

3.3 Isolation, Loneliness and Immunity - The Art of Ideology and Structural Violence

To explore issues such as COVID-19, we need to escape ideological narrative designed to appeal to our emotional responses. In The Perverts Guide to Ideology, Slavoj Zizek references the example of the film *They Live*³⁸ to illustrate how we are trained to be oblivious to the structural violence all around us.

Much of this structural violence occurs without us noticing but the measures, taken ostensibly in response to COVID-19, impose real damage through isolation and loneliness. How many have needlessly died alone during the "lockdown"?³⁹

Space Does Weird Things to Astronaut Immune Systems⁴⁰ - Scientists found that the immune systems of 28 astronauts seemed to be temporarily altered during their six-month missions aboard the International Space Station. It's not yet clear how these changes arise, or whether they pose serious medical risks to today's astronauts.

Loneliness 'may affect the immune system'⁴¹ - "Being lonely won't just make you miserable; it could also suppress your immune system and knock years of your life," the Daily Mail reports. This headline was prompted by a laboratory study in humans and rhesus macaque monkeys, which aimed to investigate if there were biological mechanisms associated with isolation that could also be associated with the risk of chronic disease or early death.

What these and other studies show is that our immune systems are interdependent and are far more complex than modern medicine would have us believe. This next article describes the vulnerability of isolated communities to disease. It is flawed, in so far as it cites Ebola, another questionable pandemic⁴² and is supportive of vaccinations but nevertheless adds a valuable perspective on isolation and disease.

Villages wiped out: why infectious diseases are so much more harmful to isolated peoples⁴³ - Small communities may remain disease-free for relatively long periods, but then lack of exposure to infection leads to a build-up of susceptibles, so then when a disease is re-introduced from outside, it is associated with high mortality in children and adults.

Are loneliness and social isolation linked? Loneliness and social isolation also share many factors that are associated with increasing the likelihood of people experiencing each, such as deteriorating health, and sensory and mobility impairments.

When observed from multiple perspectives, it becomes clear that the complexity of our immune systems and how they respond to disease is little understood or deliberately ignored by modern medicine. Scientists abstract elements of a system (in this case, the immune system) for isolated study. In ignorance of how the system works as a whole, they tend to make erroneous assumptions in support of their theories. Consequently, their results tend to reinforce their prior beliefs. This is a problem which dogs academia⁴⁵ and explains how disastrous "groupthink" is prevalent across the expanse of issues and events which affect us today, COVID-19 being typical.

Needless to say, "social-distancing" reinforces loneliness and isolation making people more vulnerable to mental, physical and emotional trauma.

3.4 Mass Vaccination

Structural violence by mass vaccination has a long history. In Section 1.4 we refer to growing awareness of the industrialisation of disease for profit, citing Virus Mania - Avian Flu (HSN1), Cervical Cancer (HPV), SARS, BSE, Hepatitis C, AIDS, Polio How the Medical Industry Continually Invents Epidemics, Making Billion-Dollar Profits At Our Expense ⁴⁶. The book describes how, during the post-WW1 Spanish Flu pandemic, scientists tried unsuccessfully to "infect" healthy people by ingesting mucus and other material from seriously ill patients and by getting them to breathe into volunteers' faces for five minutes. Virus Mania provides a powerful indictment of vaccines. The "Spanish Flu", took some 20 million lives and it wasn't the flu virus that killed most people but the masks, mass vaccination programs and the nascent "healthcare" industry's medical interventions that led to people dying en masse. Those treated with traditional, natural remedies recovered.

the virus or whatever it was that was causing the flu should still be around in his mucus, in his nose, in his lungs.

"But not a single healthy man got sick."143

A comparable experiment, carried out under much stricter conditions, took place in San Francisco, with 50 imprisoned sailors. But, once again, the results did not correspond with what the doctors had expected:

"Scientists were stunned. If these healthy volunteers did not get infected with influenza despite doctors' best efforts to make them ill, then what was causing this disease? How, exactly, did people get the flu?" 144

The scientific community was stunned, appalled and remained clueless as to the cause of the illness in so many vaccinated victims. The facts show that they covered up their dirty secret and today we are paying the price.⁴⁷

There appears to be multiple causes of disease rather than a single "virus", leading virologists talk about the "terrain" within which disease occurs, i.e. our immune system. Our immune systems are under constant attack from factors both within our control and from external sources. Lifestyle, food, water, air quality, pharmaceuticals, psychology and microwaves can all prejudice our ability to resist disease.

It is notable that the 20 million who died during the Spanish Flu "epidemic" had been subjected to mass vaccination programmes and coincidentally had been exposed to electromagnetic frequency radiation (EMF) with widespread introduction of radio. There was another flu "epidemic" in 1952 which coincided with the global use of radar. Today, we're undergoing the roll-out of 5G both terrestrially and in low space orbit. Could this be a factor in this so called pandemic?⁴⁸

Mass vaccination programmes have resulted in dramatic increases in previously rare conditions such as autism⁴⁹ and some countries are pushing back against the global bodies promoting mandatory vaccination. All the indications are that modern vaccines are produced primarily for profit and may be designed to achieve objectives⁵⁰ other than what is understood by most people, i.e. to immunise against disease.

3.5 Masks

Late into the "lockdown" period in the UK, on 15th June 2020, Transport for London (TfL) made the wearing of masks compulsory for all journeys by bus, train or taxi.

It's worth mentioning that government diktat is not the only means of imposing new conditions on people's behaviour. This can be achieved by restricting our ability to live as we did before unless we comply with regulations imposed by providers of goods and services.

This video⁵¹, of a lady being denied medical care because she couldn't/wouldn't wear a mask, is illustrative of how far we've come towards the imposition of totalitarian rule, even though there are many exemptions and mask wearing is not a legal requirement.

Wearing a mask reduces oxygen intake and downcycles air we breathe. A video from the US, which has been removed from YouTube but is available on BitChute⁵², showed that wearing a mask reduces oxygen intake by up to 20%. US regulations mandate a minimum of 19.1% oxygen when working in a confined space. Normal levels are around 21%. Wearing a mask reduces oxygen intake to c.17%.

In other words, mask wearing prejudices the immune system and reduces our physical and mental capacity. An environment populated by people wearing masks is characterised by separation and fear of the "other". In short, masks are structural violence in action, even if those who "choose" to wear masks remain unaware of their debilitating effects and take comfort in the ironic belief that they are "saving the NHS". The same NHS that is currently not treating people with serious, often life threatening conditions. At the end May 2020, there were 2.4 million patients awaiting cancer treatment alone in the UK⁵³.

In a recent paper⁵⁴, we show examples of how contradictory or "inconvenient" evidence is removed. The aforementioned information on mask wearing has fallen victim to the "YouTube thought police" who dictate what people should and should not be allowed to study. Censorship of relevant information denies people the right to make appropriate decisions for themselves and supports the Big Brother paradigm where people should only "do as they are told". Ignorance makes people controllable and vulnerable to structural violence.

3.6 Mass Manipulation and Torture

A short video⁵⁵ highlights the parallels between proven torture techniques as described in the 1973 Amnesty International *Report on Torture*⁵⁶ and the systemic torture applied to the global population using COVID-19.

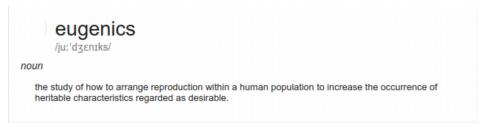

Corroboration that we're being subjected to torture comes from a 1963 CIA manual called *Kubark Counter Intelligence Interrogation*⁵⁷ which draws on Gregory Bateson's *Double Bind theory of Schizophrenia*⁵⁸ and is explained in the current context by Richard Grannon⁵⁹.

Belief in the COVID-19 trojan requires our programmed misunderstanding of the nature of viruses and the workings of the human immune system and, arguably, has been refined through successive manufactured pandemics described in *Virus Mania*⁶⁰. That COVID-19 is a planned operation is revealed in the Lock Step section of the Rockefeller Foundation document, *Scenarios for the Future of Technology and International Development*⁶¹, published in 2010. A rehearsal of the operation, Event 201⁶², was conducted on 18th October 2019 in New York involving the Johns Hopkins University, the World Economic Forum (WEF) and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

The plans, which have been available since March 2020 or earlier, are in plain sight on the WEF Strategic Intelligence website⁶³. This sophisticated, complex, global project and the supporting website will have taken months or even years to conceptualise, develop and implement. We know the pandemic strategy was "envisioned" by the Rockefeller Foundation long ago. If the WEF plan is a genuine, spontaneous reaction to COVID-19, how did they manage to have the global, integrated response, two hundred layers deep, in copious, granular detail, by March 2020 when the "virus" had only just hit?

The existence of these plans, currently being implemented by the authors, reinforces the claim, in Section 1.1, that COVID-19 is a trojan, not a virus.

3.7 Eugenics Never Went Away

Thomas Malthus published *An Essay on the Principle of Population*⁶⁴ in 1798. Charles Darwin connected Malthus's ideas to his own work on species to conclude, "organisms overproduce by default because many of them are eliminated before reaching reproductive age owing to factors such as predation and lethal illnesses."⁶⁵

Advocates for eugenics went one stage further by advancing gene selection as a technique to improve the "quality" of the human stock. Naturally, they and their class were favoured as "superior" and should be encouraged to breed while those who were regarded as "feeble minded", disabled or tainted by hereditary "criminality" should not only be discouraged from breeding but sterilised by force... more structural violence.

Eugenics was growing in popularity across the Anglo-American world before World War II but the movement had to distance itself from associations with National Socialist Germany's eugenics programmes. Pre, during and post WWII, Germans were demonised and the term "eugenics" became toxic. ⁶⁶ However, eugenics never went away, It just went underground and re-emerged as a collection of euphemistically labelled organisations such as the Family Planning Association, Planned Parenthood and the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

While Wikipedia is not the most reliable source when dealing with contentious information, two sections: *Marginalization after World War II and Crypto-Eugenics*⁶⁷ and *Modern eugenics, genetic engineering, and ethical re-evaluation*⁶⁸ in the entry for History of eugenics provide more information (at the time of writing this paper), on post-war developments and the organisations that emerged or changed their names.

Consequently, the discredited eugenicist and overpopulation propositions continue to be relied on by those controlling the levers of power. Not only is the Malthusian proposition of over-population wrong but mass participation is an essential ingredient to facilitate the current plunder and the control agenda. In Section 5.1, we talk about the network effect which has created the opportunities for a few to exploit the many, as well as fostering conditions for a paradigm shift in people's perceptions and behaviour.

There is a paradoxical contradiction between population reduction and the current system of control. If people realise they are being manipulated to participate in their own demise, they will cease to comply.

3.8 World Domination

The ideology of eugenics underpins the COVID-19 trojan and is the foundation for the agenda of the cult that claims a divine right to rule. They believe they are "chosen"⁶⁹ and use the global levers of power to exercise that right.

Critical Thinking exposed the three fundamental foundations of today's political economy: institutional hierarchy, theft of the commons and *usury*⁷⁰. It is these flaws that have allowed the Structural "Elite" (referred to in Critical Thinking's analysis) to implement their agenda to date but, as we'll explore in Section 5, growing recognition of the roots of our problems and the gathering momentum of decentralisation may yet render their plans impotent.

4 Cui bono - Who Benefits?

Drawing on numerous independent sources, Critical Thinking co-created its analysis in collaboration with many others and provided its methodology for anyone to use and adapt as they choose⁷¹. It is the power of co-creative exploration that enables connections and relationships between people, organisations, events and issues to be viewed from multiple perspectives. This reveals the reality of today's political economy in a way that is almost impossible for any single individual or group to analyse.

When we explore the connections and relationships integral to the COVID-19 trojan, we see how everything is linked. Money drives everything and those who control and benefit from the current money system are both "benefactors" (i.e. investing in the agenda) and beneficiaries (i.e. profiting from the agenda).

The creation and control of money are vested in the banking families, headed up by the House of Rothschild, whose well-hidden web of control touches every lever of power.

4.1 Rothschilds

There is no definitive narrative which encompasses the history and activities of the Rothschilds whose predilection for secrecy is legendary. However, when viewed from multiple perspectives, their wealth and power are revealed.

Is Rothschild the richest and most powerful family on the planet?⁷²

Rothschilds, MIMAC and 9/11⁷³

How the Rothschilds use Mass Surveillance and Nanotech Bioweapons to Sustain the Imperial British World Order⁷⁴

To understand the full extent of the Rothshilds' global power and fabulous wealth, one needs to explore many sources because their name often appears in such a way that it is are mentioned in passing or as incidental to the main event or issue. When viewed in the round their part in world events is seen to be pivotal.

Clearly, the Rothschilds aren't the only beneficiaries of today's political economy although the rich and powerful are often chosen, groomed and incentivised to be their fronts or agents. When one explores the roots and origins of the wealth and power of the likes of JP Morgan, one finds a web of Rothschild connections. For example, JP's father, Junius Morgan was a Rothschild agent.⁷⁵

Similarly, the Rockefellers have long been closely affiliated with the Rothschilds⁷⁶ as has George Soros⁷⁷. And then, of course, there is Bill Gates. James Corbett recently produced a four part series on Bill Gates based on meticulous research that exposes his family's eugenicist connections and explodes the myth of the college school geek who made good.⁷⁸

To understand the pivotal role of Bill Gates in the COVID-19 trojan, his support for mass vaccination programmes, plus the money and eugenicist connections behind him, we need to understand the origins of the sickness and disability industry, euphemistically characterised as "healthcare" or "medicine".

Before the twentieth century, diet and lifestyle were understood to be important factors in the treatment of disease; recommendations to change both, together with natural remedies (homoeopathy, herbalism and naturopathy), were the default responses to illness and injury. However, nature's proven remedies are gifts which are difficult to commercialise. Thus John D Rockefeller (whose father had been, among other things, a snake-oil salesman) and others created and controlled medical and academic institutions to legitimise allopathy (modern medicine) as the only valid form of medicine and to discredit natural remedies. Although doctors pay lip service to diet and lifestyle, there is an inculcated sense, both within the profession and among the public, that pharmaceuticals are a "get out of jail free card", i.e. if you're aren't going to change your lifestyle, there are pills and medical procedures to compensate. Rockefellers and their collaborators, such as Bill Gates, profit from pharmaceuticals as well as the hospitals, medical supplies etc. in which they are invested.⁷⁹

Bill Gates, as the spokesman for the mass vaccination agenda, has made frequent reference to vaccinations as the means to reduce population, notably in a 2010 TEDtalk.⁸⁰ In a 2015⁸¹ TEDtalk he predicts a global pandemic, referencing Ebola and Spanish Flu from which he alleges 30 million died but, as explained in Section 3.4, the 20 million who died had been subjected to mass vaccination programmes. In an interview with the Financial Times in 2020⁸², Gates announced that his foundation will focus 'total attention' on COVID-19 pandemic.

While Bill Gates, the Rothschilds, the Rockefellers and George Soros are obvious beneficiaries of plunder, there are others, such as those referred to in a Forbes report in January 2019, that just 26 individuals own as much wealth as half the world's population, i.e. 3.6 billion individuals⁸³

A 2011 study⁸⁴ into 43,060 transnational corporations (TNCs) revealed that 40% were controlled by a "super-entity" of 147 corporations. Furthermore, measured by turnover, they controlled 60% of the TNC network. Within this 147, 45 of the top 50 were financial companies. The study only looked at common directors and shareholders registers; beneficial ownership is often hidden behind trusts, foundations and complex corporate structures⁸⁵. If the 2011 study was to be repeated today, it is likely that the number of component corporations would be even smaller.

When we explore the connections of entities used to obscure the real beneficiaries of these corporations, all the indications are that at the centre of this "super-entity" are the Rothschilds. They've gone to extraordinary lengths to hide their real wealth and power and their control of media ensures that they never appear in "rich lists". The factual evidence has yet to be pieced together into a comprehensive, coherent and consistent narrative.

5 Benefits for All

Is the new world order and one world government inevitable? Will the "benefactors" and beneficiaries, described in Section 4, succeed in their plan to gain total control of people and resources on the planet? Possibly not.

We are in a war of centralised power versus distributed self-organisation⁸⁶. Our previous two papers, *Structures and Money in Transition*⁸⁷ and *The End of the Age of Plunder*⁸⁸ explain that powerful, self-interested forces (who have benefited from the age of plunder) are driving the decentralisation of money. The Rothschilds control the levers of power through centralised control of money. It follows that distributed money in the form of tokens for all, as described in those two papers, is the mechanism that will eliminate their grip over money and consequently all the other levers of power currently under their control.

5.1 Network Effect

The network effect is a phenomenon whereby increased numbers of people or participants improve the value of a good or service. The Internet is an example of the network effect. Initially, there were few users on the Internet since it was of little value to anyone outside of the military and some research scientists.⁸⁹

A Google search of "richest people":

Top billionaires: who are the richest people in the world?

- 1. Jeff Bezos, $113bn. ...
- 2. Bill Gates, $98bn. ...
- 3. Mark Zuckerberg, $78.6bn. ...
- 4. Bernard Arnault & family, $76bn. ...
- 5. Warren Buffett, $67.5bn. ...
- 6. Larry Ellison, $59bn. ...
- 7. Amancio Ortega, $61.9bn. ...
- 8. Jim Walton, $54.6bn.

These and others, (there is no mention of the Rothschilds whose wealth eclipses them all by many multiples) benefit from the network effect through membership of global organisations and attendance at invitation only meetings where they collaborate and collude to maximise their wealth and power. Furthermore, a major driver of their wealth and power is the network effect among billions of individuals.

Fortunately, the internet has created the opportunity for all of us (billions) to also benefit from the network effect.

The internet may have been originated by the US military. The internet may have been given to the world in order to create the infrastructure that is today deployed for plunder, surveillance and control but first and foremost, the internet is a tool.

Much like a hammer which can be used for construction or as a weapon, the internet is a double-edged sword that is transforming the political economy in ways that have yet to be fully appreciated. Historians, in the future, may well refer back to the internet and the world wide web as being even more pivotal in the evolution of society than the printing press which started the process of democratising knowledge. Distributed collaboration through the network effect has the potential to render institutional hierarchy (See Section 3.8) impotent.

Throughout history, "authority" has sought to censor and control information but a distributed network like the internet means that total control of the narrative has become much more difficult to achieve. Meanwhile, the network effect of so many individuals communicating and sharing knowledge is having a profound destabilising effect on centralised power.

In the two previous papers (referred to at the beginning of Section 5), we point to free, open source software as an exemplar of the power of distributed collaboration to co-create global, complex systems⁹⁰.

This distributed collaboration is being replicated in the creation of alternative money systems that could easily eclipse both the existing (and failing) fiat money system and the planned central bank digital currency/ies.

What is vital to understand, is that while central banks (and others such as Facebook's Libra⁹¹) refer to using the "blockchain", what they don't explain are the essential differences between "permissioned" and "unpermissioned" blockchains. The former are centrally controlled while the latter are not. The jargon that is used in relation to Bitcoin, the blockchain, crypto-currencies, digital ledger technology, etc., is conflated to confuse. However, when one understands the terminology⁹², one can see the glaring differences between what is proposed by "authority" and the distributed alternative.

5.2 Exchange Value or Use Value?

Centralised control of money results in exchange value as the primary mechanism for economic activity. Prices are determined by those who wield the power of the "short-side"⁹³ and are maximised for profit, irrespective of their use value (Section 2, The End of the Age of Plunder⁹⁴).

Tokenisation, as described in the two papers (referred to at the start of Section 5), creates incentives to embed use value into the interconnected human environment, giving rise to inclusivity, mass participation and diversity. Use value will drive attitudes and behaviour within the political economy away from the current, competitive, ego-centric, eugenic mode to one in which self-interest is served by co-creative development while preserving the integrity of the distributed money system. This allows the distributed system to become self-regulating⁹⁵, obviating the need for external regulation or "trusted third parties" to police economic activity.

Incidentally, "authority" is desperately trying to bring the anarchic, self-organising alternative currencies into the purview of centralised regulation before it becomes overwhelmed by the forces for decentralisation. Regulation has failed in the fiat currency controlled world⁹⁶. There is no reason to believe it will succeed in this new environment in which it has much less of a foothold.

5.3 No Return to Plunder

In the two papers (referred to previously in Section 5), we refer to money as Pixie Dust and how people are denied access to it and, consequently, participation in consumption and economic activity.

The COVID-19 trojan is denying access to Pixie Dust to even more people. One solution to mass unemployment, that is gaining traction within financial and political circles, is universal basic income (UBI). However, receipt of UBI is likely to be conditional upon compliance with rules mandating vaccines, mask-wearing, social distancing and contact tracing.

What tokenisation offers is unconditional access to Pixie Dust and, independently, others are beginning to see its potential to liberate people from the grip and structural violence of centralised control⁹⁷.

There is an historical precedent from the early 19th century when the island of Guernsey issued its own currency⁹⁸ in order to renovate its infrastructure and reinvigorate economic activity on the island.

The inclusive tokens⁹⁹, described in the papers, are backed by human activities and consumption. As such, inclusive tokens are both powerful remedies during a financial crisis and could provide the fundamental monetary framework of the distributed global political economy. They can be backed by a labour force and could be augmented by other components, i.e. resources such as gold.

Burkino Faso, a primary gold producer, has no control over its currency and as a result, neither those who mine the gold nor the country itself benefit fairly from this valuable resource. Tokenisation would ensure a fair distribution of the rewards.

As we highlight in the papers, there are other precedents and projects which are already broadening access to economic participation such as the Brixton Pound¹⁰⁰, BoaCompra¹⁰¹ and many more.

The foundations for a fully distributed, tokenised, global economy are already in place and while mainstream banking institutions¹⁰² are creating their own "permissioned", i.e. centrally controlled currencies, they may quickly find that in order to survive and capitalise on the new monetary environment governed by use value, they will have to decentralise their offerings.

Current attitudes and behaviour reflect incentives and penalties integral to today's political economy and are characterised by competition arising from institutional hierarchy which is supported by theft of the commons and usury. These are the foundations of power which permit the few to rule the many; a phenomenon that was insightfully articulated five hundred years ago by Etienne De La Boetie in his *Discourse on Voluntary Servitude*¹⁰³ and recently explored in a conversation between Keith Knight and James Corbett¹⁰⁴.

Ideological frameworks such as socialism, capitalism etc. do not provide the means of escape from centralised control.

The means of escape is tokenisation to co-create a distributed monetary environment which, in turn, fosters a harmonious, co-creative social environment that rewards collaboration and mutual support. In such an environment, people cannot help but change both their attitudes and behaviour. Use value will become the defining criterion for economic activity and society; thus discouraging plunder and structural violence, i.e. the ills plaguing society today.

No longer will we be held as hostages to exchange value determined by the structure of centralised money systems. All the plans to harness our wealth creating capacity will count for nothing because they will have no use value.

Authors and methodology

The information and analysis provided in this document is derived from, and builds upon the work of Critical Thinking, a research and analysis project involving Clive Menzies, Alex Nikolov and many others. Critical Thinking's methodology is available as a free, open source project for anyone to copy, share, use, or adapt - CoCreative Learning¹⁰⁵.

Clive's experience encompasses a wide range of management positions within the financial services and technology sectors, augmented by his extensive research of the political economy. This has led to the formation of MacroRisk Connect¹⁰⁶, which encourages the creation of self-organising learning groups to expand our understanding of the rapidly changing world and thereby help people and organisations to adapt and prosper from the opportunities that change brings.

Alex has 30 years proven enterprise experience in telecommunications and related technologies. He is now focusing on the structural changes caused by distributed ledger technologies, whilst contributing to the co-creative learning methodology that led to the creation of MacroRisk Connect.
